

January 2, 2022 - My Three Sons and a New Year

But first, a moment of thanks for the beauty of fresh snow as I drove around Marrowstone after Christmas Day. A gift that so far has not damaged power or fiber infrastructure on the island!

All three of my sons are independent business people and as such, are busy all the time as is their Dad. All three live around the Eugene, Oregon area.

My youngest son, Nathan, gave me a pleasant surprise last month when on a phone call he declared he was going to train someone to supervise his business operation in Oregon for a few days so Nate can drive up here to visit.

A couple of years ago, I did the same to visit Nate's business in Oregon. As a farming endeavor, it is way to physical for this old guy! At that time, I started describing to Nate the Marrowstone Wireless operation up here.

When Nate was a young boy he was always interested in what I was doing and he showed a knack for the same technologies I was working in (computers, design and programming) which he has turned into a hobby of electronic music production.

So, I am hopeful that Nate can find the right person to tend his farm while he comes to visit his old man. I am, of course, going to bend his ear as to why he should consider selling his business in Oregon and move back to Jefferson County (he is a graduate of Port Townsend High School).

As Nate's Grandpa Doug (my Dad) worked until he died at the age of 96, there is plenty of time for Nate and I to work together on Marrowstone Wireless... A father's dream.

Peace, David
